Overview of third-party investment services

Within the framework of the investment business, Zuger Kantonalbank may deploy investment instruments such as investment funds and structured products of third-party providers. Sales commission may be generated periodically from the agreements with these third-party providers; as a rule, this is dependent on the sales or investment volume of a specific instrument. In the case of investment funds, periodic sales commission (also known as "trailer fees") is paid on the sum invested in the investment funds. The Bank forwards all trailer fees paid on investment funds to its clients.

For standardised structured products from issue, the Bank charges the custody account holder the Bank's purchase price / market price plus brokerage fees. The Bank does not receive any compensation from the issuer for standardised structured products.

In the case of tailored structured products, the Bank may receive compensation in the form of a discount on the issue price. This can be seen as a third-party benefit due to the custody account holder, but the custody account holder explicitly foregoes payment of this fee pursuant to clause 24 of the custody account regulations. Accordingly, no other commissions or fees will be charged to the client.

The following table shows the ranges within which the discounts can fluctuate. The custody account holder can at any time request information from the Bank on the discounts relating to the structured products held in the custody account.
